NEW ENGLAND FLOODS CAUSE DAMAGE

MASSACHUSETTS HIT BY CLOUDBURST AND DAMAGE IS $600,000

Hundreds Out of Work
When Water Floods
Textile Mills

Springfield, Mass., July 27.—Damage estimated at half a million dollars was done in Hampden County today by a severe electrical storm that culminated in a cloudburst here.

Streets were washed out, foundations of buildings undermined, cellars of homes and business places flooded, trolley cars derailed by washouts and crops on many farms ruined.

Adams, Mass., July 27.—Floods following a cloudburst over the Berkshire hills here today did damage estimated at $100,000 tied up two mills, threw 900 operatives out of work, halted railroad traffic, interrupted trolley service and brought business in the town virtually to a standstill.

Clarence Hoedecker was the hero of the cloudburst. Enroute to Pittsfield on his way to work, Hoedecker discovered a culvert on the Boston and Albany railroad washed out and the rails sagging.

Hoedecker ran up the track and flagged an oncoming local passenger train.

The basement of the Renfrew mill was flooded to the depth of seven feet. Belts and other machinery accessories were ruined by the water. Five hundred persons were thrown out of work and damage estimated at $40,000 was done at this plant.

Company officials estimated that it would take two weeks to repair the damage.

The weaving department of the Berkshire cotton company was flooded necessitating the closing down of the plant. Damage at the Berkshire Company's plant can be repaired within a day, the four hundred operatives there were notified.

The water came down in torrents from the hills, washing out roads and flooding the valley of the south branch of the Hoosac river. Tracks of the North Adams-Pittsfield line of the Berkshire Street Railway Company were under water in several places.

FINGER PRINTS MAY IDENTIFY VICTIM IN ROCKY RIVER MURDER

Relatives Believe Body Is That Of Akron Ex-War Veteran
Is Learned

Cleveland, Ohio, July 27.—Finger prints of the Rocky River murder victim were on the way to the war department in Washington today in the hope of confirming an identification of the youth as Walter Foshia, 28, formerly of Akron.

The identification, the most positive thus far in the long line of "positive" identifications was made by Charles Foshia, 17, South Ford Street, Akron, a brother, and Clyde Mealy, 15, Hale Street, Akron, a half brother.

A scar on the knee, the result of an operation, and another on the lip, the result of a dog bite, were relied upon by the Akron men in making the identification. Foshia was a veteran of the world war and the verification will depend upon whether or not his finger prints check with those on file in the war department.

OHIO JOINS NATION IN PAYING TRIBUTE TO LATE STATESMAN

Cleveland, O., July 27.—Ohio joined the nation today in paying tribute to William Jennings Bryan. In Cleveland the flag on the city hall was at half staff. Prominent men, who had known the fallen leader during his long political career, united in his praise.

"He was an undisputed leader in both political and religious movements," Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war declared. "His death will cause widespread grief, both among those who followed him and those who admired his firm stand and the greatness of his talents."

"One of the foremost men in American public life has passed away," Maurice Maschke, Republican national committeeman, declared. "Bryan ranked as a man of unusual ability and as the greatest orator in the country."

"Mr. Bryan's wonderful following throughout his career was a tribute to his earnest desire for the public welfare and his exceptional ability as an orator," said former Senator Allee Pomerene.

BRITISH RECOGNITION London, July 27.—The news of Mr. Bryan's death came too late to allow much editorial comment in the British press but the papers generally gave considerable space to accounts of the circumstances of his death and the high lights in his political career.

GREAT BRITAIN NOT TO MODIFY RUBBER RESTRICTION LAWS

Rubber Fortunes Must Pay
American Debt Is Cause
For Situation

London, July 27.—It was obvious today that Great Britain has no thought of modifying her law restricting the export of crude rubber, to meet the request of the American government.

The reason for this is that huge British fortunes are being made under present restrictions and Britain is depending upon her rubber trade to pay the British debt to the United States.

Although Ambassador Houghton will informally advise the foreign office of the attitude of the United States, the International News Service understands that the American ambassador has already learned through private conversations that there is little prospect of the British government intervening to relax the present restrictions.

Not only are great fortunes being made on the London exchange on rubber stocks, but some British newspapers indicate plainly that the section of British public, which still retains the terms of the debt settlement with the United States is thoroughly enjoying Uncle Sam's present discomfiture.

Moreover, this section of opinion is taking great glee at the opportunity to tread upon Uncle Sam's toes.

The question of modifying the rubber restrictions may be brought up in the house of commons today.

XENIANS SAW BRYAN HERE SIX YEARS AGO DURING DRY DRIVE

Commoner Was Guest Of H. E. Rice—Spoke Here Ten Years Ago Also

William Jennings Bryan paid his last visit to Xenia about six years ago, when he addressed a large crowd at the First M. E. Church in the interest of the Ohio prohibition campaign for which he was touring the state.

On the occasion of that visit the great commoner was a luncheon guest of Harry E. Rice publisher of the Xenia Herald, and former postmaster, who had been a personal friend of Mr. Bryan since the latter's first campaign for president in 1896. Mr. Rice entertained several prominent Xenians with Mr. Bryan at luncheon at the hotel, and afterward rode with him to the church, where he delivered his address.

Mr. Rice's friendship for Mr. Bryan began when the former was a guest in the Bryan home at Lincoln. He had been active in the commoner's campaign, taking a prominent part in the financial end of the Nebraska's effort to be elected president. He was a great admirer of Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Bryan spoke here previously to his last visit, about ten years ago when he was on another speaking tour and addressed a crowd in the Beiderwolf tabernacle on North Detroit St. He had also been heard here during his presidential campaigns. Mr. Bryan had many admirers among Xenians, and his sudden death at a time when it was believed that he was about to begin one of the greatest fights of his life, that against Modernism, brought personal sorrow to many.

REVIVES OLD SUIT

St. Clairsville, July 24.—Mrs. Lina M. Milligan of Anaheim, Calif., has entered suit here to have a judgment for $314.50, granted February 5, 1889, in Belmont county court here renewed. The amount of the original judgment, with interest, has now been tripled. Mrs. Milligan asks $1,001.68 from Laura C. Acton and others. The original judgment issued nearly forty years ago, was against William G. Todd. His heirs are now involved.

DEMOCRATIC MANTLE MUST DESCEND FROM BRYAN TO NEW CHIEF

Death Leaves Party Rud-derless—Cox is Now
Suggested

Washington, July 27.—The dramatic passing of William Jennings Bryan removes from the stage of American politics one of its most colorful, powerful and at times puzzling, figures.

While politicians here differed today as to the precise effect the death of the commoner may have on the fortunes of the party be dominated so long, there was common agreement among them that the removal of the so-called "Bryan influence" will have a tremendous and far-reaching effect on future Democratic policies.

It is no secret that many prominent Democrats, including some of the commoner's friends, have been deeply worried over this same Bryan influence. To its power and its potency they attributed the tempestuous scenes at the Madison Square Garden convention a year ago.

While Bryan denied that he intended to "put God and the Bible into the constitution," there are not a few sober-minded Democrats who have been fearful that the great crusader intended to do just that.

Bryan was frankly and openly in his later years, at least, an exponent of the union of the Democracy of the southern and western states, designed to overcome what he considered the "reactionary nothern Democracy."

By the same token he was frankly and openly opposed to the great democratic machines of the north—Tammany in New York, the Sullivan-Brennan combination in Illinois, the Taggart organization in Indiana, the Hague machine in New Jersey and their allies. The record of his bitter and unyielding opposition to these powerful political factors has been written in every Democratic national convention for the last two decades.

His favorite description of them was "reactionary and wet," as opposed to the southern and western elements which he always characterized as "progressive and dry," and so great was his influence, so magic his voice, so potent his evangelistic appeal, that every Democratic convention since 1896 has been divided more or less sharply along these lines, never more markedly, perhaps than in 1924.

Now with Bryan gone, with the bell-like voice that seldom failed to sway great crowds, forever stilled, thoughtful Democratic leaders were asking themselves today:

"Where is his successor?" and in the same voice they were saying privately:

"There is none."

And predicting a gradual elimination of sectional lines and party rejuvenation and solidarity, the Democratic party is now leaderless. The two great leaders who have dominated its policies and its candidates for virtually thirty years—Wilson and Bryan, are both gone.

Democratic history for thirty years is the record of the activities of these two men.

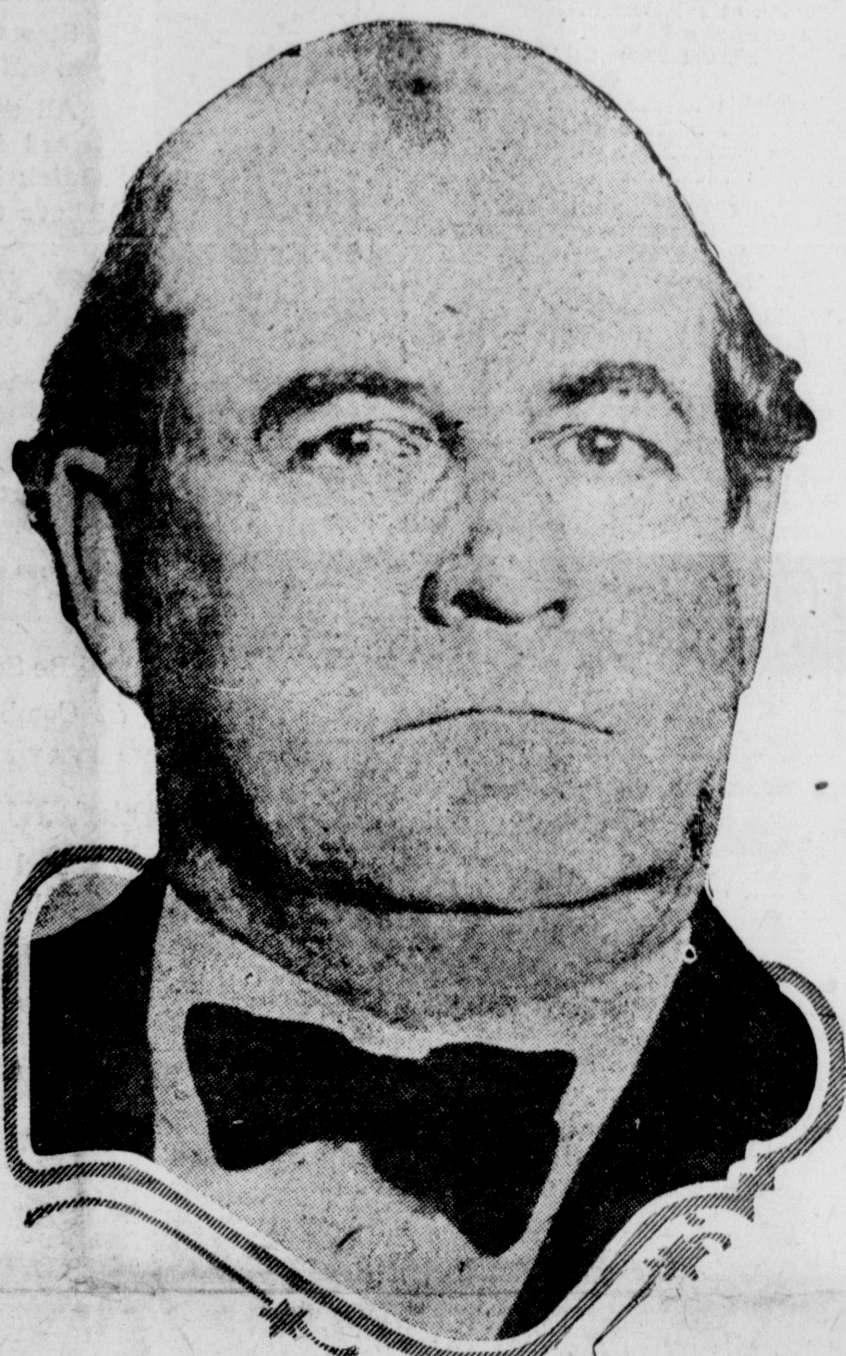

There remains as powerful factors in their respective spheres a quartet of men prominent in Democratic eyes because of their activities since the 1920 convention—John W. Davis, defeated in 1924; James M. Cox, defeated in 1920; William G. McAdoo and Al Smith of New York.

There are few independent Democrats who believe that the mantle of leadership can be draped about any one of these. It is accepted as axiomatic by the sober minded Democrats in congress, at least, that Smith and McAdoo eliminated themselves by the unprecedented bitterness and animosities engendered at Madison Square Garden. For either of them to endeavor to seize the helm now would be calculated, they believe to re-ignite the fires of discord and religious differences.

Both Cox and Davis have the disadvantage of having been overwhelmingly defeated in national elections. And it is a political maxim that leaders are born of successes, not of defeats, Bryan being the exception that proves the rule.

There exists plenty of time for this search for a national leader. Three years must elapse before the Democrats are called upon again to nominate a standard bearer and in three years much can happen.

COMMONER DIES SUDDENLY

William Jennings Bryan, Democratic leader, thrice candidate for president, former secretary of state and more recently distinguished for his fight in the cause of religious fundamentalists, died on the scene of his last great battle at Dayton, Tenn., Sunday. Burial will probably be made in Arlington Cemetery, Washington, D. C., with military honors, the "Commoner" having served through the Spanish American War.

KAISER INTERESTED IN AFFAIRS OF WORLD, WIFE SAYS IN INTERVIEW

Former Emperor Was Pleased With Election of von Hindenburg, Hermine Says, but Declines To Discuss German Politics.

Editor's Note: This is the fifth and last installment of a truly remarkable interview with Princess Hermine, the Kaiser's wife.

In previous installments Hermine has painted a vivid picture of Wilhelm's life at Doorn. She has answered many questions in the public mind. She has defended him passionately against charges of cowardice, she has denied that the exiled emperor had any hand in the election of von Hindenburg to the presidency of Germany and she has revealed what she said is now Wilhelm's consuming ambition—to clear the fatherland of the accusation that Germany alone was responsible for the war. This is his aim, she said and religion is his forte.

"There is no bitterness in Wilhelm's heart now," she said. And there is no thought of revenge."

By S. DUNBAR WEYER

Wild Bad, Black Forest, Germany, July 27.—Hermine characterized as "utter trash, cheap scandal-mongering," the story which has been persistently circulated that the Kaiser sought rejuvenation through surgical aid. That was all she said on the subject.

She also characterized as "one of those notorious fairy tales" the report that some one reads the newspapers for the Kaiser and "doctors then by merely submitting what Wilhelm likes to read."

On the contrary Wilhelm keeps a most vigilant watch, not only upon the German press but more particularly the foreign press, regularly subscribing to the leading American and British papers.

"A professional 'yes-man' or clipper would soon be out of a job," said Hermine.

In recent months the Kaiser has had many scientists among his guests at Doorn and holds long debates with them on manifold subjects.

KEEPS MIND ALERT
"You know how versatile he is and these constant intellectual exchanges keep his mind alert. He has never been so fresh mentally as he is now and his intense interest in topics of the day and his pet study, archeology, keep him from falling into melancholy brooding."

"In the course of his seven years of solitude and meditation he has gradually regained his elasticity. The big thing that has kept him vigorous and sound in his body and mind is the iron self discipline which he has practiced since his youth."

COMMONER PASSES WHILE TAKING SUNDAY NAP AT DAYTON, TENN.

Leading Fundamentalist, And Democratic States
Called a Scene of Last Great Fight—Death
Due to Apoplexy and Hemorrhage.

BURIAL WILL BE IN ARLINGTON CEMETERY

Body Found By Chauffeur—Statesman Was Thrice
Candidate for President—Funeral Services Will Be Held In Washington, D. C.

Dayton, Tenn., July 27.—William Jennings Bryan is dead. Remaining here after the close of the Scopes evolution trial in which he turned from politics to battle with all his strength against what he described as attacks on revealed religion, the commoner died peacefully at 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, sleeping at the home of a friend.

Death was caused by apoplexy and a hemorrhage. He had been engaged since the trial in completing a book, carrying on his militant campaign throughout the trial, half of fundamental Christian doctrines, and had been expected to speak tonight on the Court House lawn, delivering his carefully prepared exposition of Christianity, "What Shall I Do For Jesus?"

During the trial Bryan had appeared in excellent health, though it was evident that the strength and oratorical which had made him one of the most famous of Americans on the decline. Bryan himself, however, had no intention of retiring from the political battleground, where he had fought for a quarter of a century and was planning to extend, rather than tail his strenuous activities.

Bravely assuming command of the party after his famous "cross" speeches. At that time he was 36 years old.

After the Spanish American War, then editor of the World Herald, opposed the Philippine Islands, and in 1900 he was again nominated for the presidency and again defeated.

Mr. Bryan then returned to starting publication of a political journal which he called the "Commoner." In 1904 he vigorously opposed the "conservative attitude" of the convention of his party which Judge Alton B. Parker was nominated.

In 1905 Bryan started on a tour around the world. Returning from this trip Bryan out strongly for world disarmament and in 1913, when he became secretary of state, he drafted the "forms of peace" between the United States and foreign nations.

In 1908 Bryan was nominated for the third time as the Democratic candidate for president, but Woodrow Wilson defeated him. His influence with the high councils of the Democratic party continued in spite his three failures to reach the White House and when Woodrow Wilson came to leadership of the party in 1913.

WHILE DAYTON MOURNS! Dayton, Tenn., July 27.—William Jennings Bryan slept today in a little white cottage on Market Street while the people of Dayton and the surrounding mountain country came to pay him homage and to marvel at the sudden death in their midst of the great political and religious leader.

Although Judge John R. Raulston, who presided at the Scopes trial in which Bryan made his last important fight, urged that the widow permit the body to lie in state in Rhea County Court House, the commoner continued to rest in the house where he died Sunday afternoon, the home of Richard Rogers, who had been the host during the twenty days he had been in Dayton.

The Rogers home is in South Dayton, a simple country house surrounded by big green trees and the wealth of shrubbery which Bryan loved. Definite funeral arrangements will be completed by Mrs. Bryan as soon as she has been informed of the wishes of her son, William J. Bryan, Jr., who is coming east from Los Angeles.

Mrs. Bryan already has made application for her famous husband to be buried in Arlington National Cemetery at Washington in view of his service as a colonel of infantry in the Spanish American War.

Illinois, March 19, 1860, he was graduated from Illinois College in 1881 and from the Union College of Law at Chicago in 1883. He was admitted to the Illinois bar and practiced at Jacksonville, in that state, for four years, going then to Lincoln, Nebraska where he made his home until a few years ago when he moved to Miami, Fla., and established a legal residence there.

Embracing the principles of the Democratic party from his early youth Bryan entered the political arena and in 1891 was a member of the house of representatives in the fifty second and fifty third congresses from the first district of Nebraska. He did not become known to the country at large until 1896, when he was nominated for the presidency by the Democratic party after his famous "cross" speeches. At that time he was 36 years old.

After the Spanish American War, then editor of the World Herald, opposed the Philippine Islands, and in 1900 he was again nominated for the presidency and again defeated.

Mr. Bryan then returned to starting publication of a political journal which he called the "Commoner." In 1904 he vigorously opposed the "conservative attitude" of the convention of his party which Judge Alton B. Parker was nominated.

ACCIDENTS BLIND 15,000 WORKERS REPORT INDICATES

NEW YORK, July 27.—There is such thing as a non-hazardous dust. This is the conclusion of the National Committee for the Prevention of Blindness, as indicated in the report of an extensive study of eye hazards in industrial occupations, issued here today.

The report declares that "of 100,000 blind persons in the United States approximately 15,000 are lost their sight in the pursuit of industrial occupations—and there is in addition to the totally blind a much larger number of men, women and children whose vision has been impaired by the eye hazards of industry that they are handicapped through life."

There is hardly an industrial occupation in America, according to the committee, which does not add to the steadily increasing number of the blind and the near-sighted. The committee found that although from a national point of view metal manufacturing industries are the source of the greatest number of serious eye injuries, in Pennsylvania the coal mining industry ranks as a cause of industrial blindness. Wisconsin it was found that tools constitute by far the single cause of eye injury responsible for 44 per cent.

CATTLE TESTED

Defiance, July 27.—Testing of herds of Defiance County under area plan and for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis was begun week in Milford township under supervision of Dr. E. L. Roshon, state veterinarian's office. About 20 herds will be tested a day about four weeks will be required to complete the tests in the county.

The county committee signed up 1,675 herds of 9,925 cattle for the tests. The number of herds in the county is 126, with 12,204 head.

Bryan Had Premonition Of His Early Death

Voiced Belief That Days
Were Numbered to Correspondent

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
Washington, July 27.—William Jennings Bryan had a premonition of death in the closing hours of his life.

He voiced this belief in the final interview given this correspondent at Dayton, Tenn., following the close of the Scopes trial. He spoke while resting on the porch of the little white bungalow where he was to meet his fate less than a hundred hours later. He was tired, dead tired, from the strain of the trial. He said so, with a sigh of relief that the "work was done in Dayton."

"Will you go to Washington to help with the new evolution case then," he was asked.

"Don't ask me that question," Bryan said wearily. "My days are numbered and I can't spare the time."

Then with a smile, he added: "I can't keep going forever and I must return to Florida to catch up with my literary work."

A telephone call interrupted the interview and Bryan went to the phone. Someone was asking him to make two speeches in Knoxville this week. The commoner was willing.

"Now don't promise two speeches," Mrs. Bryan interposed. "You haven't the strength. One address is enough. You don't need to wear yourself out, they'll be satisfied with just one."

But Bryan said he would make two speeches, one on "The Tennessee case" and another on "What Will You Do With Jesus?"

When the commoner returned to the porch he said:

"My I'm tired."

And then with a far away look in his eyes, as he gazed out over the green Cumberland hills, he touched that note of destiny again in the same words:

"My days are numbered," he said slowly. "But when I am gone, Christianity will not want for leaders. This fight here has awakened churchmen everywhere to the insidious attacks of irreligion. In the Scopes trial, we unmasked the infidels and the church is now on guard."

Asked to his plans for the future, Bryan said he had about made up his mind to abandon the lecture platform which he graced for three decades. There were a few more addresses, he said, long promised, which he must fulfill in the vicinity of Dayton and then he would go to Florida.

"I owe myself a long rest," he explained. "And I want to resume my literary work."

Then with a smile of understanding for the reporter, he added:

"You know, I can reach a larger audience by writing than by lecturing and it isn't near so wearisome."

A few more words about the search denied him at the Scopes trial, which the commoner planned to give to the public as a statement on the issues of the evolution case and the interview was ended.

Over it all there lingered that twice voiced reference to the approaching end:

"My days are numbered."

BASEBALL TUGGING CONTEST FEATURES TWELFTH WIN OF MERCHANTS

Becoming a ten run lead by rally in the late innings, the Xenia Merchants extended their winning streak to twelve games and defeated the undefeated Millard team of Springfield 17 to 16 in a featured by the terrific clout-out of both teams Sunday afternoon at Johnson Park.

Following Sunday, the Merchants' victory over the Cloisters' winning streak had reached fifteen games. The Merchants' outlasted the locals nine to sixteen and piled up an amazing lead in the early innings scoring ten runs in the third. The Merchants fought a great uphill battle and won out in the closing innings scoring seven runs in the ninth and winning out in the ninth. The visitors had tied the score. The Merchants won three hurriers.

It was hit harder than in any game this season but stuck in the ninth innings and received a hit for the victory. It was his first win of the season. The largest crowds of the season turned out to witness the classic and between 400 and 500 fans packed the park. The Merchants opened the scoring first when Duffy was hit by a ball. Singles by Cozier and Miller followed, driving in two runs. The Merchants were followed by Porter and Holt and a drive by Shoecraft put the Merchants in the lead by one run in the last.

The Merchants scored in the second and the visitors hammered the Merchants for ten runs and a big lead in the third. The Merchants batters tied two homers, two triples, two singles, which, coupled with the Merchants' errors of the Merchants produced ten tallies.

The Merchants increased their lead in the fourth with a circuit clout while the Merchants added another on a sacrifice. The Merchants' lead was held scoreless in the fifth and sixth while locals were unable to take advantage of the lapse in Millard's pitching. The Merchants were able to score five runs and a big lead to four runs. A double by Shoecraft, a double by Miller followed by a walk and a double by J. Jones and a double by Miller figured in the Merchants' single and a walk gave the Merchants another run in the sixth. The Merchants helped itself to two other runs in the seventh while Xenia was unable to score.

The Merchants went back into the lead by a run in the eighth. Tuck's sacrifice in the ninth with a home run, a single, Hardnick tripled, Miller obtained a scratch hit, and Miller singled. Morris batted for and delivered with a pinch hit and cleared the sacks and put the Merchants ahead.

In the final frame, Scott scratched to the second and came home trying to run on a single by Miller. A second homer by Shoecraft in the ninth won the game and the Merchants' record intact.

After the game, the Merchants will play a return game with the Dayton Merchants of Dayton at Johnson Park. Bus transportation for the Eastwood game will be provided for the first time next Sunday as announced.

OF ORIENT RIVAL OHIO'S SAY FARM EXPERTS

That is probably the oldest business in Ohio—the business of farming in southeastern Ohio—is the subject of a four-page circular issued this month by the Ohio State University's agricultural college extension service. In comparing this business of farming with the management of a modern industry, the leaflet points out that the soils, which are the workshop of the farmer, if judged as the soils of China and Japan are judged, should be the most fertile in the state. Because they have been cultivated the longest. If, however, they are judged by their present content of phosphoric acid, lime, and organic matter, they are ranked as inferior to those of the younger agricultural sections of western Ohio.

Now the job is to replace those soil losses. The author of this leaflet, M. V. Bailey, soils extension specialist at the State University. And that means fitting the business of the farmer by using rough land or forest, steep hills for permanent pasture, and so on. It means, Mr. Bailey continues, factory improvement by good under-drainage of the land; speeding up production by adding phosphoric acid and lime and organic matter; conservation of that valuable by-product, manure; and, what is "the neglected side of the business," the more land in permanent pasture.

One of this leaflet, Timely Soil for July, with its discussion of management in southeastern Ohio, is sent free to Ohioans on request to the agricultural publications at the Ohio State University.

OF RETIRING SCHOOL HEAD DIES

Louis Waltz, mother of C. A. retiring superintendent of the schools, died Saturday afternoon at her home in Columbus following a long illness. Prof. Waltz and his family were at her bedside when she died. She was the only surviving child of a family of nine. She had been with her mother most of the last ten days. Mrs. Waltz leaves her husband, Miss Waltz went to Columbus to attend the funeral which was held Monday.

GLASS PUZZLES THOJANS AND RESERVES ROMP AWAY WITH PASTIME HERE SUNDAY

BY L. J. WONES
The Xenia Reserves took advantage of the ragged playing of the Troy All Stars Sunday afternoon at Washington Park and defeated them by a 11 to 2 score in a sloppy game. Glass, Reserve hurler, won his second game of the season and pitched a nice ball all the way although he was wild and passed five and hit two. He sent eleven of the Trojans back to the bench via the knockout route. His support was fairly good and the two runs the visitors scored were not earned.

Helke, southpaw who pitched for the Shroyer Cubs earlier in the season, did mound duty for the losers. He pitched nice ball but his support was rank. He was touched rather hard by the Reserves, who got nine hits off him but he held the locals to two earned runs. If the All Stars had a first baseman, catcher and an outfielder the game would have been a tight affair.

The locals scored in every round up until the fifth when Helke retired them in order. They had a fat round in the fourth when the team batted clear around and scored six runs. Cain played good ball for the locals and got two doubles and scored three runs. Early and Cyphers also got two hits apiece.

Valentine and W. Babb starred for the losers on the defense. The first named athlete accepted seven chances at short without an error while W. Babb made some nice running catches in short and deep centerfield. Valentine and Helke were the only visitors able to connect with Glass for a safety. Helke getting two of the three bingles.

The lineup: Reserves—J. Fuller 2b; Cain 1b; Early ss; Cyphers 3b; P. Fuller lf; Friend c; Milburn rf; Fuller cf; Glass p.
Troy All Stars—Davis 2b; Valentine ss; Abshire lf; W. Babb cf; Helke p; V. Babb 3b; Roach rf-1b; Pearson c; Smitley 1b; Brumbaugh rf.

CENTRAL HIGH CLASS HOLDS REUNION

Eleven of the original twenty-four members of the class of 1902, Central High School, met in annual reunion Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thearl White, Corwin Avenue.

The custom of getting together annually is one which this class has followed since graduation, a record unequalled locally and believed to be matched in this locality only by the class of 1902 of the Portsmouth High School, of whose record the local class learned recently.

An invitation was received from the Portsmouth class to meet with it in joint session and arrangements will be made for the two classes to get together in the early fall.

Incidents of school days were recalled in joyful fashion at the reunion and a picnic supper served on the spacious lawn of the White home.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. George F. Schlesinger of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Leon Spahr; Mr. and Mrs. Charles O'Brien and son Charles John; Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Kany and sons Howard and John of Dayton; Mr. and Mrs. Thearl White; Miss Edna Bloom, Mrs. D. W. Cherry, daughter Anita and son David, Miss Jessie Maxwell, Mrs. Stella Derrick Hubbard and Miss Harriet McCarty. Greetings by wire were received from Miss Irma Finley, general secretary of the Y. W. C. A. at Atlanta, Ga., who was a member of the class.

DELEGATES RETURN FROM CONVENTION

Miss Julia Wolf and Miss Olivia Cost who were delegates from the local club to the national convention of The Business and Professional Women's Clubs at Portland, Me., returned home Sunday.

Following the convention which lasted a week and which was attended by three thousand women from all over the country, the Xenia girls joined a party of ten Ohio delegates who took a trip into Canada as far as Quebec. They came down to Montreal where Miss Wolf saw her cousin, Mr. Richard Gowdy, who is connected with the Stevenson Corporation there and has been in Canada for nearly a year. They returned by way of Buffalo Niagara Falls and Cleveland.

On the last day of the convention the festivities were marred by a street car accident in which three Columbus girls, members of the Ohio delegation, were hurt. They are still in a Portland hospital. The convention delegates were being taken to a beach for what was called the "prank fest," when the accident occurred.

The Ohio candidate for national president, Mrs. Olin Jay Wright of Cleveland, was elected by a large majority.

Miss Katherine Conklin, nurse at Christ Hospital, Cincinnati is now engaged in private nursing at Moore's Hill, Ind. Her transfer was made a short time ago.

Mrs. Howard Norris of Hill Street left Monday afternoon for Akron, Ohio, where she will join her daughter Mrs. Frank Land and son Norris who will accompany her on a trip to Gas City, Ind. While in that city they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Behem. They will return to Xenia Friday when Mrs. Land and Norris will enjoy a vacation at the Norris home.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leopold and family of Tippecanoe City were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Leopold of South Detroit Street.

The executive committee of the Greene County W. C. T. U. will hold a meeting Tuesday at the First Baptist Church, opening at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. James Q. Edwards and little son Jimmie, of Flint, Mich., are the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Edwards, of Washington Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Butcher and their children, Mary Jane and Henrietta, of Chicago, motored to Xenia and spent the week end. Mrs. Butcher was before marriage, Miss Ruth Knowles, and spend her childhood in Xenia.

Still Picking

Edward W. Browning, wealthy New York realtor, was undecided on the little girl he would adopt as a playmate for his adopted daughter, Dorothy. Thousands of little girls answered his advertisement.

Mr. J. B. Logsdon, of Urbana, O., has accepted a position as linotype operator at the Gazette and Republican. He is taking the place of Mr. J. Burr, who resigned Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Zimmerman of the Fairground Road, are the parents of a nine pound son, born Sunday. The child has been named Charles Edward.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Clemans of Cedarville, Ohio, entertained Miss Ella E. Bickett, Mrs. William Eyer and Mrs. Clara Chapman over the week end.

Mr. Curtis Stearns, of Washington Street, is recovering from a serious attack of ptomaine poisoning. He has been quite ill for several days.

The Misses Nell Fletcher and Elsie Weber will spend this week at Sulphur Lick Springs.

BEGINS NEW TERM

Harvey Elam, re-elected as Greene County Clerk of Courts at the 1924 November election for two more years will officially begin his second term of office, Monday, August 3. Mr. Elam has furnished $10,000 bond and Saturday took his oath of office before Probate Judge S. C. Wright.

Captured

All Italy was aroused at the theft of jewels and treasures of great religious worth from the Vatican at Rome. Two of the alleged vandals, Grasianni Luigi and Mariano Stella, were captured.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Irwin of North Galloway Street, are receiving a visit from Mr. George Carines of Peterboro, Can. Mr. Carines was a boyhood friend of Mr. Irwin in Peterboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Spahr and Miss Elizabeth Alexander returned Saturday afternoon after a motoring trip to Chicago where they visited Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Prugh.

Mrs. J. G. Mitchell of North King Street, spent the last two weeks with her daughter, Mrs. C. T. Legg of Columbus.

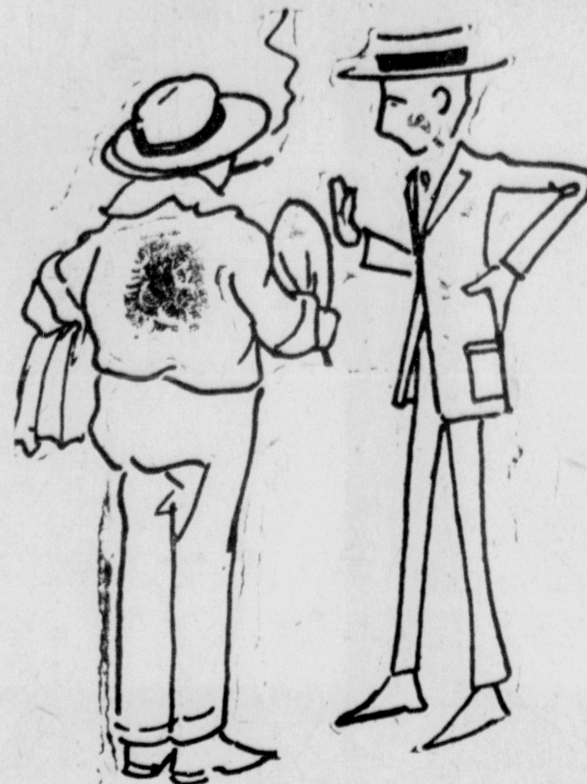

Mr. Gay Burr, linotype operator at the Gazette and Republican, has resigned his position and has taken over the management of the Colonial Theatre, Washington, C. H., Ohio. Mr. Burr assumed his position Monday.

The Junior Music Club will meet at the home of Miss Helen Benbow, of North Galloway Street, Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The main feature of the afternoon will be the election of officers. All those desiring membership in the club are requested to be present.

A party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Smith, the Misses Eleanor and Mary McDonnell of Walnut Street, Miss Katherine Langan, Miss Mary Heaven, Miss Mary Langan, and Thomas Langan started yesterday by motor for Niagara Falls and other points in the East. The party is travelling in two automobiles.

President W. R. McChesney of Cedarville College, Mrs. McChesney and Miss Frances McChesney, have returned home after a two weeks' visit in Michigan. The trip was made by motor.

WHEN the Washington chopped down the cherry tree, it was a tragedy. It was a tragedy because the cherry tree was a symbol of the nation's greatness. It was a tragedy because the cherry tree was a symbol of the nation's future. It was a tragedy because the cherry tree was a symbol of the nation's hope.

When the cherry tree was cut down, the nation was left with a gaping hole. The hole was a symbol of the nation's loss. The hole was a symbol of the nation's despair. The hole was a symbol of the nation's hopelessness.

Clam Savory: Buy one pint of clams and after cleaning them and separating the hard and soft parts (chopping each rather coarsely) put the hard parts into saucepan with two tablespoons of bacon drippings or butter, and cook for four minutes; now add two tablespoons of flour, a pinch each of salt and pepper, and one cup of sweet milk. Stir till smooth, then also add the chopped soft parts of the clams. Turn at once into a buttered baking dish, sprinkle the top with one cup of uncooked minced celery, add a top layer of buttered bread crumbs, place slices of uncooked bacon over all, and slip the dish into a hot oven to bake for 20 minutes. It should be brown when done. Serve at once.

Peach Custard: This is a most delicious dessert. To make it, you must have cake left-overs—preferably sponge cake. Or you may buy lady fingers to use, instead. Put alternate layers of this cake and fresh sliced peaches (pared) in a fancy dessert dish and pour the following boiled custard over all. It will sink into the layers of cake and fruit by the time it is chilled and ready to be eaten.

Today's Talks

The other day my friend and I lunched at a popular restaurant. The head waiter led us into a small room off of the great room where hundreds of people were sitting at their meal. But I would have none of it. I wanted to be in the big room where the people were.

I like to study people, I like to hear the hum of their voices. I like to feel that invisible vibration of a crowd. That is half the fun of eating anyway.

Also I like to be in crowds, in large gatherings, and where the streets are a mass of moving folks.

But this is what I notice in the great street crowds—there are so many faces that look hard and cold drawn. So when you do notice a face that is fresh and vibrant you are immediately attracted to it, and for blocks thereafter you carry the image of its beauty and the inspiration of its influence.

In the big city so many people are trying to outdo or outshine someone else, and the atmosphere is mostly insincere and false.

You see the God of Money in the deep shadows that darken so many faces. You see unhappy lives in rich raiment.

Yet the crowd is quite representative of us all to a greater or lesser degree.

A few years ago I used to occasionally meet a young working girl in the elevator which carried me to my offices. She always had such a calm and peaceful expression on her face. She always looked happy. I used to wonder what she did, and where she lived, and what made her face so beautiful, for she wasn't pretty, she was beautiful. And now, though I have not seen her for years, the memory of her face is as fresh in its beauty and loveliness as though I had seen it today.

This girl was unconscious of the fact that she gave happiness to others because of her own lovely soul, and there are many just like her. How wonderful to be the source of such inspiration!

The great thing about leadership is not to know that you lead.

PATIENTS RECOVER

Columbus, July 27—The percentage of recovery of patients suffering with insanity has been increased in Ohio state hospitals by the use of hydrotherapy, or the water-cure, John E. Harper, state health director declares in his annual report just issued here. "Since introducing hydrotherapy more extensively, we use less restraint, fewer narcotics, and the patients are more quiet and better contented," he said. "The acute cases are restored to health in less time than if hydrotherapy were not administered." Facilities for these treatments were greatly increased in the various hospitals during the last year, it was pointed out.

PAIR FINED AFTER AUTO HITS BUGGY HERE ON SATURDAY

As an aftermath to an auto accident at Detroit and Second Streets Saturday night, Raymond Trusty, 22, Mechanic Street, was fined $100 and costs by Judge E. D. Smith in Police Court Monday morning for operating an auto while intoxicated.

Charles Schrey, 40, this city, companion of Trusty, was fined $25 and costs by Judge Smith for intoxication. Both pleaded guilty to the charges, and Judge Smith "trusted" Trusty for the money.

Trusty's auto is said to have collided first with a horse drawn vehicle parked on West Second Street and occupied by a Mrs. Frank, who was slightly injured. The wheel of the buggy was broken. The machine then swerved and hit another car with no damage resulting.

Trusty was driving a Ford touring car rented from the Carl Anderson Rent-a-Car firm. Schrey occupied a rear seat.

Patrolman Charles Thompson arrested the pair.

AUTO DAMAGED BUT DRIVER IS UNKNOWN

A Moon roadster was found partially wrecked on the Xenia and Jamestown pike two miles from Xenia Sunday night. Although the occupant is believed to have been a Dayton man, his identity is unknown.

The driver is thought to have received minor leg injuries in the accident. Cause of the smashup is unknown.

According to an unconfirmed report, the machine was being driven toward Xenia, and collided with another machine being driven in the opposite direction. The Moon caromed into a ditch, struck a telephone pole and glanced off into a second pole.

The hood was smashed, two fenders were bent and the front end was damaged. The car was taken to Gordon Brothers garage, for repairs. The car bore an Ohio license number 469,117.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD HERE SUNDAY

Mrs. Elmer Fisher of this city and Mrs. W. L. Dolohan of Dayton arrived here from Portland, Ore., Saturday night, bringing the body of their sister, Mrs. Mary Lemon McIntire, who died at her home in that city Sunday, July 19. Mrs. Fisher and Mrs. Dolohan, who started for Seattle after learning of their sister's serious illness arrived there shortly after her death.

Funeral services were held at the Fisher home Sunday. Interment was made in the Spring Valley cemetery.

Besides her sister, Mrs. Fisher and Mrs. Dolohan, Mrs. McIntire is survived by her father, Casper Krug, and a brother, Ray Krug, of Spring Valley.

ROAD CONTRACTS TO BE LET FRIDAY

Bids will be opened Friday by L. A. Boulay, state highway director, for improvement of state highways to cost approximately $4913,241. Besides being the last to be made by Boulay, who retires from office as director August 10, this is one of the largest lettings in the history of the department, it is said.

One project in Greene County is listed which includes 6.304 miles, Dayton and Chillicothe Road, or Jamestown Pike to be improved at a total cost estimated at $56,547.

DAUGHTER OF BRYAN LEARNS OF DEATH

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of William Jennings Bryan, who lectured here a week ago last Wednesday on the Redpath Chautauqua, received the news of her father's death at Mt. Vernon where she was notified by a newspaper man upon her arrival from Columbus, where she had spoken earlier in the day. Mrs. Owen at once got into touch with her mother at Dayton, Tenn., over long distance telephone.

Mrs. Owen and her husband Major Reginald Owen were guests of Mrs. Mary M. Meredith here for several days at the time Mrs. Owen appeared here on the Chautauqua. Those who heard her were impressed with her charm and power as a public speaker, the daughter showing that she had inherited the silver tongue of her distinguished father.

SENATOR FESS TAKES VACATION AT LAKE

United States Senator S. D. Fess left his home in Yellow Springs Sunday afternoon for northern New York before word of the death of William Jennings Bryan had been received.

The senator will probably give a statement regarding the death of the great commoner from Tupper Lake, in the Adirondacks, which he is expected to reach Monday afternoon.

Senator and Mrs. Fess expect to spend two weeks at Tupper Lake at the summer home of a friend.

Mr. and Mrs. Lehr Fess will keep the Yellow Springs home of Senator Fess open during their absence.

MARRIAGE TAKES PLACE IN KENTUCKY
Mr. Russell McCallister of Springfield and Miss Laura Allen of 129 Trumbull Street, were married in Kentucky, Saturday morning according to announcement made to friends Monday. Mr. and Mrs. McCallister will live in Springfield.

Physical Culture

By far the best method of testing the fasting cure is to begin with one or two days, unless, as I have previously stated, one is absolutely satisfied that it is a wise course to fast longer, and furthermore, that he has the will power to carry it to the finish. Even under such circumstances, if he has had no previous experience, it would be well to test out the fast with two or three short periods of abstinence before beginning a longer period. This advice, of course, is given to those who expect to attempt to fast on their own account and who are not in a position to secure the guidance of an expert.

A fast is usually termed short when it fails to continue to what we call "the finish"; that is, to that particular period when the tongue clears and other evidences appear which indicate that the body is thoroughly cleansed of all impurities. While we term short fasts those ranging from one to ten days, as a rule they do not continue longer than four to six days. A fast of that period can be continued with little or no inconvenience—in fact, with very little decrease in strength—if one will realize in the beginning that strength is not necessarily secured directly from the food that is eaten, and that weakness is usually caused not by lack of sufficient nourishment, but because of the toxic or poisonous elements that accumulate in the blood. For instance, whenever one feels weak, it is not because he needs a meal, if he is in the habit of eating regularly; it is caused by the poisonous effete elements that are accumulating in the circulation. Dizziness naturally may be caused by too much blood pressure on the brain, or the lack of such pressure, but the general feeling of lassitude and weakness is induced entirely by the causes herein mentioned.

One may fast one or two days, and as previously stated, continue his regular eating habits thereafter with no inconvenience, provided he is careful not to over-eat at first, and he can even continue a fast up to four or five days, resuming eating with care. A good plan in trying out short fasts is to fast one day and eat two days; then fast two days and eat four days and continue on in this manner.

MODISH MITZI—Dance Frocks Destined For A Career

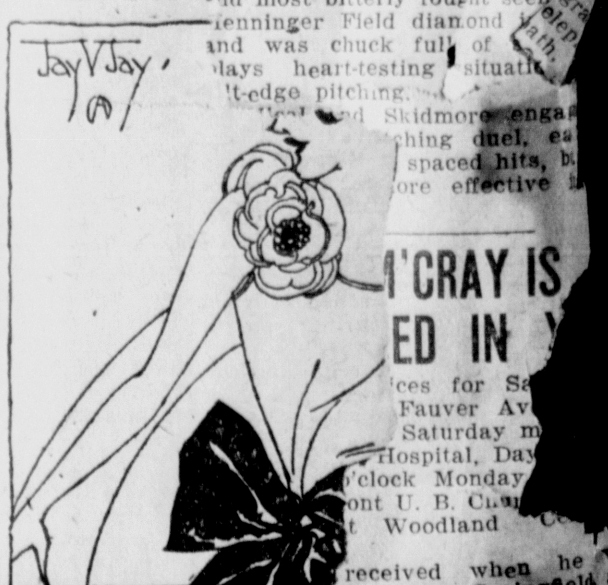

"I would like," said the man to his hostess, "to have a dance with the girl who is wearing that flowery, fluttering thing." A few minutes later he got his wish and the flowers turned out to be wild roses and the dress chiffon, and Eleanor turned out to be the most delightful partner.

Polly's partner is murmuring sweet nothings into her ear. (Her stunning gown has a lace bodice and the skirt is very full and flared.) He is saying something about her dress being adorable—and Polly is replying that it is really nothing at all—knowing very well that it is one of the smartest on the floor.

Above all things, a fanning three-man desired to have an extract of the in the orchid gown of the game, green ribbon. "rownie" Wical really became a game and with the aid of a brilliant sort of dress, blanked the league-leader, and, "The game was one of the laid lived up and most bitterly fought seen in the history of the game."

Mitzi—our gorgeous southern traction car at before every dance and goodness knows, it occurred shortly there will be best funeral and burial in the sleeveless chiffon, daughter, Miss Mary McCray, rose on her shoulder. McCray is survived by sash of the same color, daughter, Mrs. Hazel Moler and many masculine Mrs. Hazel Moler and McCray, of Belmont.

SIDNEY BOY KILLED

The Evening Star, July 27, 1925.

A 14 year old boy, Sidney, was killed at Sidney, Ohio, by a tractor. The tractor was being driven by a man who was not licensed to drive. The tractor was traveling at a high rate of speed and struck the boy. The boy was killed instantly. The tractor was damaged. The driver was arrested and is being held for trial.

crease in the cost for each crop acre where tractors are used. On the western Ohio farms the cost for operating each crop acre was $17.34 before a tractor was used, and $18.20 with a tractor. The next year, however, this cost was cut to $17.69 continuing to drop until 1922 when it reached the low point of $15.84, or $1.50 below horse operation. On the smaller farms of eastern Ohio tractor costs were nearly a dollar higher than horse labor costs.

REAPPRAISAL WILL BEGIN LATTER PART YEAR IS INDICATED

According to an announcement by the state tax commission Friday, a majority of Ohio counties must begin re-appraisal of real estate immediately under a state law passed last year, effective this week.

Thirteen counties in the state are exempt because of property revisions made in 1924. The new law provides for re-appraisal every six years.

County Auditor R. O. Wead is looking forward to making arrangements for appraisal in Greene County toward the closing months of the year, as the state commission announced it will be lenient in its interpretation of the law. Greene County has not conducted a re-appraisal since 1910, but Auditor Wead anticipated no radical changes in property values.

It is said many smaller counties are planning to conduct appraisals in sufficient time to collect taxes for the last half of the year on the new values. A number of larger counties will be unable to do this and probably will be unable to get but little field work done before January 1926, it is said.

WILL ENFORCE NEW ARTERIAL SYSTEM STARTING MONDAY

With work of erecting fifty stop signs on three main thoroughfares in the city completed Friday by employees of the city and officials of the Greene County Auto Club, Xenia's arterial intersection stop system is completely installed, it is announced.

Various intersections have been stenciled with the word "stop" and fifty signs have been placed 100 feet from the intersection on all streets intersecting Main, Detroit and Market Streets.

City officials are attempting to educate the motoring public before enforcement starts, and a careful survey has shown that seventy five per cent of motorists are complying with the regulations, according to Oliver Belden, secretary of the auto club.

Enforcement is expected to be effective starting Monday with arrests for offenders.

OHIO TO BE SHORT IN FALL PIG CROP SAYS JUNE SURVEY

Ohio stands lower than any corn-belt state in the number of sows bred or to be bred for farrowing this fall, according to figures just received from the United States Department of Agriculture.

Rural economists at Ohio State University who have reviewed the figures say that farmers in the corn belt states appear to be breeding their sows in direct proportion to their last year's corn crop, and since Ohio had the poorest corn crop, this state is breeding the fewest sows.

"The number of sows farrowed this spring in the United States was nearly 20 per cent below a year ago and 36 per cent below the spring of 1923"

YOU POOR KID, WHY ARE YOU SO SKINNY?

Doesn't your mother know that Cod Liver Oil will put pounds of good healthy flesh on your bones in just a few weeks?

Tell her every druggist has in sugar-coated tablet form now so that you won't have to take the nasty, fishy-tasting oil that is apt to upset your delicate stomach.

Tell her that McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets are chock-full of vitalizing vitamins and are the greatest flesh producers and health builders she can find.

One sickly kid, age 9, gained 12 pounds in 7 months.

She must ask Sayre & Hemphill or any good druggist for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—60 tablets—60 cents—as pleasant to take as candy.

says C. R. Arnold, one of the economists. "This shows an immense decrease in hog production in the last two years, and this decrease is largely because hogs have been cheap compared with corn."

"Sows bred or to be bred for farrowing this fall are about the same as last fall, according to the survey conducted jointly last month by the Federal bureau of agricultural economics and the postoffice department. In Ohio figures show that the number is 5 per cent below those farrowing last fall, or the lowest of any of the corn belt states. Figures for the entire corn belt show an increase of 1 per cent.

"With the price of hogs somewhat advanced during the past year and with indications for a good corn crop this fall, it is quite probable that there will be a considerable increase in breeding stock within the next year."

EXHIBIT PICTURES

Columbus, July 27—Canvases from leading modern artists will be exhibited at the art show of the Fine Arts Department at the Ohio State Fair here, opening August 31, according to announcement today by Mrs. Harriet Kirkpatrick, Columbus, who will have charge of the exhibit. Galleries in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toledo and Columbus will be represented. Exhibits also will be shown of processes of manufacture of art objects. These will include weaving, batik dyeing and others. The structure devoted to this phase of the state fair has been completely renovated, it is announced, and ample room will be available so that the famous canvases to be shown can be hung to advantage.

TEL. 91-R

Funeral services for John Price, inmate of the Greene County Infirmary, will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock in the chapel at the Infirmary. Interment will be made in Cherry Grove.

French Johnson, 78, died suddenly Sunday evening at 9:30 o'clock while attending church services at a church on Taylor Street. He had been in failing health for some time but his death was unexpected.

He was the last member of his family and had lived in Xenia at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Fannie McDonald, 1024 East Church Street for some time. Mr. Johnson came to Xenia from Lexington, Ky., thirteen years ago. He was preceded in death by his wife six years. He saw service in the civil war and was a staunch member of the Third M. E. Church. He is survived by four stepchildren, Mrs. Fannie McDonald, with whom he made his home, of Xenia, Mrs. H. P. Miller of Richmond, Ind., Felix Jones, of Dayton, and Thomas Jones, of Muncie, Ind.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. at the Third M. E. Church with burial at Cherry Grove.

Delegates to the Baptist State Sunday School and B. Y. P. U. Convention, which met in Lockland, O., last week have returned, bringing tidings that the sessions were the best ever held in the history of the convention.

The B. Y. P. U. Convention was of unusual interest owing to the fact that the choir of the various Unions in the state entered into a contest, the winners to receive a loving cup.

Harmony, phrasing, enunciation and grading of the piece sung were the points on which they were to be judged.

Zion Baptist choir under the capable leadership of Mrs. Charlotte Land, represented Xenia and counting the above points received the highest honors, but because of the fact that nine little misses from Cincinnati, dressed in uniform and ranging in age from nine to twelve years, rendered their music from memory they were awarded the prize.

INDUSTRIAL LOOP TEAMS LOADING UP FOR TILT WEDNESDAY

The baseball classic of the Industrial League season is promised fans attending the game between the league-leading Hooven and Allison team and the Pennsylvania Railroad Wednesday night at 6:30 o'clock at Washington Park diamond. The game was originally scheduled for Thursday.

Both teams have obtained the services of two of the leading twirlers in the county especially for the Wednesday game and a "pitchers' battle of the century" is promised.

Wells, former Bowersville hurler, now with Washington C. H. in the South-Central Ohio League, will twirl for the H. and A. nine. To offset this advantage the Pennsy nine will have Glass, also a former Bowersville Bay-liff hurler who is on the mound staff of the Xenia Reserves.

Both teams are considered about evenly matched in pitching strength.

WICAL IS WINNING LAURELS FOR WORK IN BLUE RIDGE LOOP

Thurman "Brownie" Wical, for Greene County twirler, now with Chambersburg, Pa., team in the Ridge League, is creating a sensation in the loop with his mound and promises to become the hurler in the league, it is said.

In a recent game with Hagerstown, Wical was in the form and won a brilliant battle by the score of 1 to 0.

Following is an extract of the count of the game:

"Brownie" Wical hurled a masterpiece and with the aid of brilliant support, blanketed the league-leaders Hubs 1 to 0.

"The game was one of the best and most bitterly fought seen in the Henninger Field diamond and was a chuk full of plays, heart-testing situations, glitchee pitching.

"Wical and Skidmore engaged an old-time pitching duel, each lowering four well spaced hits, but Wical was the more effective in pinches."

SEWING MACHINE IS MOST IMPORTANT IN MACHINERY OF FARM

If an Ohio farm family were limited to two modern conveniences, first place would probably go to sewing machines and automobiles.

That was the way it turned out in a household survey made by Paulus, graduate student at the Ohio State University working under the late, professor of rural social science.

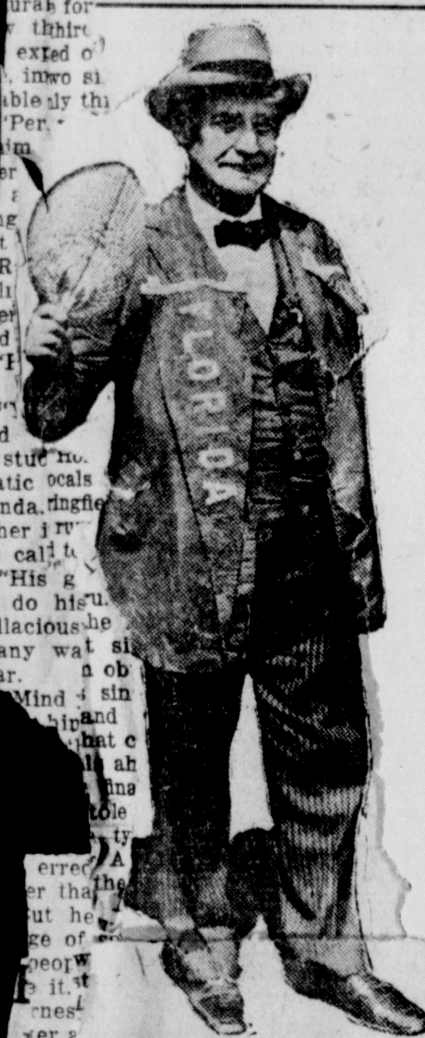

Most commonly distributed conveniences, Mr. Paulus reports, "were sewing machines, oil or gas stoves, and sinks. The automobile was as well as a family convenience, was outnumbered only by the sewing machine. The low frequency of telephones (22 per cent) was a surprise."

Eighty-eight of the 100 families in the area visited had sewing machines. Other conveniences ranked as follows:

- Automobile, 66; sink, 43; oil or gas stove, 41; washing machine (hand or electric), 35; piano or organ, 33; phonograph, 33; gas or electric iron, 32; home, 22; vacuum cleaner, 13; refrigerator, 12; fireless cooker, 3.

Eighty-five families engaged in the survey of these are rented to owners, the survey shows. The possessors of bath and kitchen stoves, and have a near monopoly of furnaces, telephones, power washers, vacuum cleaners and musical instruments.

YANKEES DEFEAT YELLOW SPRINGS IN SUNDAY PASTIMING

Shadley pitching in his best, the Bowersville Bayliffs defeated the Yellow Springs A. C. in easy fashion, 7 to 3, Sunday afternoon at Yellow Springs.

Shadley obtained a three throw in the second but Shadley missed and held the home team scoreless during the last seven innings. He was especially good with men on the bases and held the losing team to eight scattered hits.

The Bayliffs tied the score in the third and went into the lead in the fourth.

Next Sunday the Bayliffs play the strong Berman All Stars of Columbus at Bowersville. The Berman carry fifteen players including three pitchers and are touted as one of the strongest teams in the Capital City.

The Berman have a youthful star in Butler, who will probably work the Sunday game. Butler was a high school sensation two years ago and in a recent game fanned five of all batters who faced him in two innings.

Another Berman star is Johnny O'Neil, short stop and promising pitcher. The team averages 17 years of age.

Probable Berman lineup: E. Brown, pitcher; O'Neil, short stop; Mason, c; Butler, p; E. Martin, 1b; Hargrave, 2b; Strader, 3b; Hargrave, 3b; Butler, p.

fect understanding and thus the conversation developed into a bilingual interview, she evincing a remarkable linguistic "feel."

HERMINE DRESSED SIMPLY Hermine was dressed simply but with great taste. A woman reporter wrote a detailed description but the writer not being a great connoisseur, must satisfy the curiosity of readers of the fair sex with the rather meagre information that the empress wore black satin with white embroidery and a string of pearls while over her wedding ring glistened a beautiful sapphire.

Hermine is the most popular visitor in this little mountain place, both among fashionable tourists who include many Americans and among humble villagers whose hearts have been taken by storm by her natural, human ways.

Toward the close of the interview our talk reverted to politics. She admitted von Hindenburg's election pleased Wilhelm because he felt that it signified a swing back away from radicalism to conversation, stability and soundness in the nation's political and economic life.

"As a matter of fact the world at large seemed to feel the same way but please—," she smiled winningly. "Please excuse me from discussing German politics. It is not my business, anyway and anything I might say would be misinterpreted by my enemies to suit their purposes."

Again she smiled, but this time it was a smile between mirth and melancholy. "Really," she said, "they have picked me to pieces enough. Please do not give them any new ammunition. I have talked frankly to you I have told you the truth but—" she concluded wistfully.

"Will it really put an end to the lies?"

"I am afraid truth only encourages the bearers of scandal to tell fresh untruths. After all, what matters! Time will convince all doubters, and the kaiser and I will live happily together just as many years as God will keep us upon his earth."

The audience was at an end.

POLICE EXAM WILL BE AT 7:30 O'CLOCK

A civil service examination will be held Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock for the purpose of obtaining an eligible list from which a successful applicant will be appointed to the late Charles Simms, as regular patrolman on the Xenia police force.

The examination of applicants will be held by the Civil Service Commission in the offices of Attorney W. L. Miller, president of the commission, in the Allen Building.

It is the intention to appoint a colored man to the vacancy following the custom of the department.

MICHAEL'S MARRIAGE

By MICHAEL

CHAPTER 105.

Michael put an arm around his wife when she sat down beside him. At particular points in Lonnie's speech that followed, the arm pressed her.

"What I have to say, Lilah," Lonnie began, drawing up a chair so that he faced them squarely and both could see the serious sincerity in his eyes, "is addressed primarily to you. It is being said around town, you know, that I'm a dirt dog, or worse."

Lilah's eyes avoided the speaker's. He continued, regarding her intently: "I know, of course, that such things have been said about me all these years, but until now I haven't minded. In fact," he smiled faintly, "I've rather enjoyed the distinction." He paused as if seeking words.

"It is being said, you know, that I am responsible for the trouble that appears to have befallen a certain young woman."

Now Lilah's eyes were full upon him.

"I declare that it is a lie that I am to blame," he declared, his face puffed with anger. "However," he added, his voice toning down, "it is true that I am, in a way, responsible for her downfall. . . . Please do not misunderstand me."

He inspected the faces of his auditors closely. Their glances were mute.

"I need your help in refuting this lie, Lilah," he went on, his voice very low. "My mother has gotten wind of it in some way. I denied the whole thing, and though she's trying to believe me it's easy to be seen that she doesn't. She's expecting me to do something."

"I'm going to tell you something now that no one else knows, except one man. He is the one responsible. He refused to help her, and she came to me for help. I couldn't refuse her. . . . But when they made her tell the name of the man, she blamed me! Imagine it! After all I had done for her!"

"Of course," he shrugged philosophically, "she loves the other man, and doesn't want to get into trouble. He's married, I suppose. If he hadn't treated her like a dog to force her to tell, . . ."

she never would have referred to me. I know that. But what am I going to do? I can't go back on the poor kid."

Lonnie added sentimental details to the brief story he had told the night Michael visited him in his room in Capper's house.

"You shouldn't let her get away with it," Michael commented, in an eventone.

"Honestly, I'm scared. I'm afraid that somebody will shoot me! I feel shaky every time I go into the street. But I can't run away, I just can't!" Lonnie's voice was tragic.

Lilah, deeply moved, stirred, wondering if he was telling the truth. She wasn't ready to believe him.

"It's just terrible," she exclaimed, addressing neither of the men. "But, Lonnie, I don't exactly see what I can do."

"I don't know for certain myself," he responded, "I have to turn to you, because I can't go to Katherine. She'd muddle up the whole thing. I can't manage to see the girl, and I've thought you might go to her for me, but I don't want you to be mixed up in it directly. I've thought you could go around and tell the women who have been gabbling about it that there's considerably more to the story. But that would be stabbing the poor kid in the back. Dammit, I don't know what to do!"

Silence immersed the trio.

With his eyes Michael asked Lilah to say something.

"Perfectly tragic," she murmured. Her husband's disappointment in the utterance was apparent.

"I think you're a wonderful guy for doing this," Michael averred, brightening up the face of the visitor.

Lonnie's answer was a wan smile. "There's nothing heroic about it. I'm just a sentimental cuss, that's all."

"Well, there must be some way out of the mess," This from Michael.

"Obviously," said Lilah, annoyed by the commonplace observation. But what is it? Her interest in Lonnie's plight was rising.

LIQUID QUENCHES AIRPLANE BLAZE

Paris, July 25.—An invention for extinguishing fire, the dread menace of all aviators, has been successfully tried out at the Aerodrome of Villacoublay by Engineer Emile Bechard, of the French Aviation Corps.

The experiment was conclusive enough to satisfy any hard-boiled air pilot. The inventor himself on different occasions, while five thousand feet up, deliberately set fire to the plane by igniting a stream of gasoline leaking at the rate of five gallons a minute and put out the fire in less than three seconds.

The apparatus can function automatically or be regulated by the pilot. It consists of a series of tubes wound around the inside of the hood, which contain essence of petrol a liquid used on account of extreme fluidity. The heat of a blaze causes the petrol to expand, thus releasing a whole series of twirling pipes similar to those employed by gardeners. These little pipes give a continuous spray of carbon tetrachloride.

After one of the experimental flights Bechard's passenger exclaimed, on being lifted out of the seat: "That was the thrill of a life-time! I saw the whole motor enveloped in flames and thought my jumping-off moment had come. Suddenly I heard a hissing, scalding sound above the roar of the motors and the rush of the wind, and when I looked at the motor again the fire had been completely extinguished."

This invention is extremely timely, as the 1924 casualty statement of the International Aero Club shows that airplane fires are responsible for more mortal accidents than all other causes combined.

AMBER ATTRACTED BUT IT WAS SOAP!

CHICAGO, July 27.—Amber—survivors of the pre-Volstead era have heard the word—tastes great in certain forms.

A crowd in the county building here one hot afternoon, noticing an array of ninety barrels labelled "Amber" in front of the District Attorney's office, thought to quench their thirst. Amber! Amber!—What?

A janitor began rolling the barrels away. The crowd stirred restlessly. "Say, what's in those barrels?" one man whispered through parched lips.

"Oh, these?" The janitor was contemptuous. "Amber soap flakes—to wash down the halls with Why?"

"Oh, nothing," the curious one gulped.

And the crowd sadly faded away.

COMMONER PASSES ON WHILE TAKING SUNDAY NAP AT DAYTON, TENN.

1912 and was elected to the presidency, Bryan was selected as his secretary of state. It was the highest political office he had ever held. He served as secretary of state from March 4, 1911 to June 9, 1915, resigning when he found it impossible to agree on certain policies with the president.

During this period in Bryan's career, he was greatly interested in means for the prevention of war and with this end in view succeeded in negotiating thirty treaties with foreign governments, all aimed at substituting arbitration for war in the settlement of international disputes.

The final phase of Bryan's strenuous life was exemplified by his appearance in the Scopes trial here. His role was that of an apostle of revealed Christianity, fighting against the acceptance or the teaching of doctrines inimical to what he regarded as perfected religion. If his fame was not already secure he made it so by his leadership of the forces of fundamentalism and he died on the battlefield which he selected for himself.

The body was discovered by "Jim" McCartney, the family chauffeur. The commoner had returned here at 9 o'clock Sunday morning after speaking in Winchester, Tenn., and calling upon publishers in Chattanooga. He attended services later at the Southern Methodist Church and led the congregation in prayer. At noon he ate a hearty meal and at about 2:30 p.m., as was his usual custom, lay down for an afternoon nap.

Mrs. Bryan and McCartney were the only other persons in the house at the time. Once or twice during the next two hours they heard him snoring and when he didn't get up at 4:30, Mrs. Bryan thought that it was merely that he was sleeping longer than usual. At 4:30 McCartney went into awaken him. He touched his foot and when Bryan did not respond looked closely at his face and immediately called for a doctor. Dr. Albert C. Broyles and Dr. W. F. Thomason responded on the run and pronounced Bryan dead.

They estimated that the end had come about three quarters of an hour before they saw the body.

Bryan's last words were spoken to his wife just before he went to sleep. The flies had been bothering him and he was killing them with a fly swatter. He disposed of one, remarked: "Well I got that one," and closed his eyes for the last time.

The body was taken Sunday evening to an undertaking establishment for embalming and was brought back later to the home of Richard Rogers, where Bryan died.

The four Dayton lawyers in the prosecution of John Thomas Scopes for teaching evolution—S. K. Hicks, Herbert Hicks, Gordon McKenzie and Wallace Haggard—watched over the body during the night.

In addition to the widow and two sons, Mr. Bryan is survived by two daughters, Mrs. R. L. Hargreaves and Mrs. Ruth Owens; a brother Charles W. Bryan, former governor of Nebraska, and Democratic candidate for vice president last year and two sisters, Mrs. Francis M. Baird and Mrs. Thomas S. Allen.
